Dear Editor,

Many articles in newspapers as well as news on both television and radio have been about the death of Sueb Nakasathien, the head of the reserved forest who committed suicide because of the shame of being a government official assigned to take care of the forest himself but unable to fulfil his duty due to the influence of merchants, police and others who are keen on destroying our forests.

I have to write about Mr. Sueb's death because I am fearful that his death will be in vain since a characteristic of the Thais is forgetfulness. Therefore, people who have talked about his devotion will soon forget the cause of his death and nothing will come of it. Hence, I would very much like to suggest that the authorities take action to fulfil his intention of preserving natural resources as well as forests for the young generation. A foundation with the purpose of protecting wildlife and forest should be fully supported.

Television series, radio programs and pamphlets, as well as newspaper columns, must be the media to publicize the usefulness of forests and other natural resources. Do take action now before we have no forests left in our beloved country.

Dear Editor,

It is believed that Thailand is becoming a newly industrialized country since we have many kinds of progress in industry. Many people have talked about producing more engineers and other kinds of vocational trainees. They seem to intentionally forget another group of people and youngsters who lack the opportunity to finish their compulsory education, let alone furthering their education at higher levels. This group of people have no means of financial support since they mostly come from poor families, especially of those day laborers who work on construction sites. They frequently move according to the work they can get.

I would like to suggest that the government take action immediately such as providing free education and even boarding houses so that these children will not have to move along with their parents and so they can get continuous education to be worthy human resources for society as a whole. Moreover, the government should issue a law about social welfare for these laborers to help them have a stable life.

Action for this matter should be taken immediately so our human resources will be put to good use in the near future.
